

Heather wins AIIP Connections Writer's Award

The Association of Independent Information Professionals (AIIP) has announced the winner of the 2009 AIIP Connections Writer's award at their annual conference in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Heather Carine has been awarded the 2009 Connections Writer's Award for her article "opportunities in a changing world."

The AIIP Connections Writer's award is sponsored by Information Today, Inc. and is awarded to the writer of the best original article published in AIIP Connections each year. AIIP Connections is the quarterly publication for members of the Association of Independent Information Professionals.

AIIP has a membership of more than 500 business owners from twenty countries around the world and is the industry association for independent information professionals.

Heather receives a cash prize from US based publisher Information Today, Inc., a leading publisher and conference organiser for information and knowledge management specialists.
